

Abstract

In a construction with walls, ceilings, and/or floors as parts of the building, especially for buildings protected against radiation, the parts of the building are made of reinforced concrete. The part of the building in a sandwich design, and one layer is made of a material that protects against radiation, and at least one layer of is made of concrete.

(Fig. 3)